DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1, 12, and 23-31 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rajagopalan et al (2004/0209705). Rajagopalan discloses a material composition useful in a golf ball core, intermediate layer, or cover. The primary ingredient is a HNP or highly neutralized polymer. The HNP is identical to applicant's ingredient (a), see page 3, paragraphs 41-43. The HNP is an acid copolymer described as E/X/Y copolymer wherein E is ethylene, X is a C₃ to C₈ α,β -ethylenically unsaturated carboxylic acid, and Y is an alkyl acrylate or an alkyl methacrylate softening comonomer wherein the alkyl groups have from 1 to 8 carbon atoms, wherein X is present in an amount of from about 1 to about 3 wt. percent of the E/X/Y copolymer, Y is present in an amount of from about 0 to about 50 wt. percent of the E/X/Y copolymer. The HNP may also be blended with a second copolymer such as an ethylene acrylic or methacrylic acid (paragraph 83). The composition may be partially neutralized with a metal cation such as zinc. The acid moiety in the composition is neutralized about 1 to 100% or at least about 40% [0047]. Since the materials are the same as applicants, the remaining properties are considered obvious over Rajagopalan.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 7-10-06 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive. Applicant argues the prior art fails to disclose the molecular weight of the polymers. It is clear the prior art does not disclose the molecular weight values, however, the monomers claimed by applicant are identical to the monomers disclosed in the prior art. Also, as stated by applicant in the response, the prior art discloses a genus, which encompasses applicant's range. The prior art claims any number from one to infinity while the present invention claims a molecular weight which indicates a specific number of repeating units. However, applicant has not shown criticality of the range or any unexpected results. The results applicant refers to in Table 4 are made from polyurethane and not the material claimed by applicant and disclosed in the prior art. Applicant is encouraged to provide an example which prove the genus species is superior to the generic species disclosed by the prior art.

Allowable Subject Matter

Claims 2-11 are objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.
